All neat cattle arriving in the United States from any part of the world, except North and South America, will be subjected to a quarantine of ninety days, continuing from the date of shipment.

J. D. Kehoe.
Carlin's Mercury.

Mason Demoreus never had a more faithful and attentive Representative than Dexter Kehoe, and no Democrat ought to fail to give him an endorsement. Without fame or fortune to add him over the rough billows of life's troubled sea, he has risen to distinction and honor among his fellows. He has paddled his frail canoe over seas that have swallowed up other men's large boats.

A Cholera Mixture.
New York Sun.

Now that it has been ascertained that the cholera which has appeared in Egypt is the genuine Asiatic article, from which the worst is to be feared should its march eastward not be stayed by its strict quarantine regulations, cholera prescriptions are in great demand by correspondents who write to the editor as if he were a personal friend and the family physician. But more than forty years what is known as "The Sun Cholera Medicine," has stood the test of experience as the best remedy for looseness of the bowels ever yet devised. Here it is: Take equal parts of tincture of cayenne, tincture of opium, tincture of rhubarb, essence of peppermint and spirits of camphor. Mix well. Dose, fifteen to thirty drops in a wine glass of water, according to age and violence of attack. Repeat every fifteen or twenty minutes until relief is obtained.

THE "SLEUTHHOUND."

The Detective's Diagnosis of the Robbery.

Philadelphia Record.

About two years ago Mr. Azariah Boody, of Newark, N. J., an enormously rich retired plumber, on returning from Rome, where he had been to select a really good cash article of title for himself, was astonished to find the front door of his splendid residence standing open, although he had closed it securely upon his departure. Proceeding further, he at once perceived by the empty wine bottles and costly vases scattered over the magnificent satin furniture that the house had been burglarized in his absence. (It seems strange that burglars should always scatter costly vases about when they rob a place, but according to the papers they will do it.) A ponderous hair trunk, in which he kept his valuables, had been opened and a set of shirt studs and a $1,000,000 package of 4 per cents removed. It was impossible to tell exactly when the robbery occurred, but the excited millionaire at once started for the office of the "Perfect of Police," as they say in all the French plays.

"On the steps of the office he encountered a keen-looking man, with the eagle nose and hawk-like peculiar to detectives who inquired if he wished to see the Chief.

"Immediately," said the millionaire. "He is in New York," replied the man on the steps, "but if it is anything of importance I will attend to it in his place."

"I have been robbed," said the victim. "I knew it," said the police attaché, with the true promptness of the profession. "Let us at once to the spot."

The plumber led his way to the house. "I trust nothing has been moved since the crime was discovered," said the detective. "Absolutely nothing," said the old gentleman, who had read Gaboriau's "M. Lecoq" four times.

"Because," said the detective "much depends on a careful study of the surroundings," and he began his investigations by measuring a square inch of the dust covered lid of the trunk. He then produced a small pair of scales, and, scraping off the inch of dust referred to, carefully weighed the same.

"Let me see," he muttered, making a calculation, "dust settles at the rate of 48-1000th of an inch per hour. It is therefore certain that the burglary was committed last Thursday at a quarter past one a. m."

"Dear me," said the old gentleman, "how wonderful!"

The detective now approached the remains of the robbers' repast. "There were three robbers," he said.

"Yes, but here are four glasses used," explained the old gentleman.

"The fourth was merely used to pour the corky top of the bottles into, explained the detective, who gave his name as Kickshaw."

"One of them was a powerful man of advanced age. See, this bitten cracker wears the marks of six decayed teeth. The second was a dandy with a long mustache, for you can see here he has repeatedly wiped it on this napkin. The third was unmistakably a woman."

"A woman!" gasped the house-owner. "Precisely. You see she has eaten nothing save pickles and the icing from this cake. In her nervousness she has upset the salt and spilled her wine on the cloth. It was her first affair of the kind."

"Yes—I see," said the old Boody, much interested. "And a pretty woman as well," went on the detective. "You see she has brushed the dust from every mirror in the room to look at herself. Next, we find that they divided the plunder on the spot. Look! Were not these broken tapes the ones with which your bond package was tied?"

"They are."

"During the division they quarreled."

"But how do you know that," said Boody.

"By this overturned chair. Besides, the piano is open, and marks of fingers are on the bass keys. Women always sit down and thump on that end of the piano when angry."

"Even when burgling?" said the old party.

"At all times," replied Kickshaw. "It makes no difference whatever. The woman had red hair."

"Had, eh?"

"Yes; she threw that book in the corner at the old man, and made him use blood. See this towel stained with blood? No one but a red-haired woman would have done that."

"How do you know it was the old man's nose?"

"Because," replied the detective, using a microscope, "the blood globules are those of an elderly man."

"I suppose they did not remain hereabouts long?" queried the plumber.

"No; they left the next morning for Chicago."

"Great heavens! what do you mean?" said the old party; "are you a magician?"

"It is very simple," said the human "sleuthhound."

"On this crumpled scrap of paper you will see some figures. Of course, the thieves could not realize on the bonds at once. They, therefore, made a computation to discover just how far their immediate cash would take them. Chicago was the result, as the total arrived at is the fare to that city multiplied by three."

"I see—I see," said the plumber.

"I start for Chicago on the next train," continued the thief-taker. "Let me see, perhaps you had better let me have $500 for expenses."

The other instantly passed over the amount.

"Remember," said the detective, as he departed, "not a word of what we have discovered. Keep perfectly quiet until you hear from me."

And to this day the defrauded plumber is sitting on his front steps waiting for news from the detective (who was nothing more than the robber himself).

The DAILY BULLETIN is walking right along to the top of the ladder.
